

A CHAIN-REACTION accident occurred on the Stroudsburg Thruway early yesterday morning when this tractor trailer skidded on the icy roadway and jackknifed on a curve, sideswiping a car and smashing it into a guardrail.

THIS CAR was severely damaged when the skidding tractor-trailer sideswiped it, knocking it off the road. Up to this point, there were not injuries caused by the freak accident which finally involved two cars and three tractor-trailers.

HOWEVER, TWO other tractor-trailers skidded upon the scene, with this one crashing into another one loaded with concrete blocks, strewn them along the roadway. A second car was struck by the above trailer in the accident. (Staff Photos by MacLeod)

'Good Person A Square' 3-Area YF Group Told

GREENTOWN — "A good person is a square," said William Hartman, speaker at the meeting of the Greentown-Newfoundland-South Sterling Youth Fellowship at Hemlock Grove.

"A really good person has a four-sided character, well-rounded in physical, mental, social and spiritual aspects of his life. This same square development may be patterned after the Christian life, the most wonderful pattern for real living you could find," he continued.

Speaking on personality development, Hartman, a graduate of Lycoming College, and a chaplain at boy scout camps told the young people that personality is the outer mask of the inner character. He reminded them that they must develop good character, so that when the mask of personality is torn away, a worthwhile individual is revealed.

John Hazelton, one of the trio of presidents of the group, conducted the service of worship, and Kurt Krieger read the Scripture.

The group will meet next week at Hemlock Grove at 7:30 p.m., with a Youth Sunday theme developed by the outreach commission including Jane Beehn, Margie Gearhart, Fred Kersey, Barry Kistler, Linda Price, Kathy Smith, Terry Voeste, Dawn Zacharias and advisors Rev. Larry Lindenmuth and Rev. James Jeffers.

Dear Abby

Make It Doubly Festive!

Dear Abby: Perhaps a disinterested party can help us to come up with the right answer in a family disagreement. Our son was born on December 25th. Since his birthday falls on Christmas, I would like to celebrate it on January 25th so his birthday can be a special occasion for him and not just all mixed in with Christmas. Most of my relatives say they will give him a birthday gift on his birthday and not a month later. What do you think about this? Would it be unfair to make him wait a month to celebrate it? Would it be unfair to make him wait a month to celebrate on the real date and let his birthday get lost in the Christmas rush?

WHAT TO DO

Dear What: Celebrate his birthday on the anniversary of his birth. Many people must share their "birthdate" with another memorable occasion. I know. I was born on the 4th of July!

Dear Abby: Our daughter is divorced, has two children and is trying to marry a 29-year-old bachelor. Instead of having come to her home to get better acquainted with her children, she drives to another town to spend the week-ends with him in a fancy motel. Our daughter maintains that if he "falls" hard enough for her he will accept her children later. We didn't raise our daughter to behave this way, Abby, but she is 23 and is her own boss so there is nothing we can do. We hate to see her make a mess of her life, but she won't listen to us. Can you help?

HER PARENTS

Dear Parents: Your daughter needs to be told by someone whose opinion she values that no man will marry a divorcee with two children if she will spend week-ends with him without benefit of matrimony. Why should he?

Dear Abby: My next door neighbor, whom I have known for two years, told me when she first moved in that she wanted to be alone, and did not care to get friendly with her neighbors. I never visited her of course, but one day she knocked on my back door and complained that I had never called on her. I was surprised, but said nothing and invised her in for a cup of tea anyway.

Later on, about a week later, I knocked on her door to show her my willingness to be friendly, and she told me sharply that she wanted to be alone and didn't care for visitors. Then this morning she came to my door asking why I never came to see her. Do you think she is a mental case? She lives alone. What should I do about it? I am beginning to fear for her.

LITTLE WHITE HOUSE

Dear Little: Find out if she has any relatives or close friends to whom you can report her condition. She appears to be irrational.

Hopes Optimistic For New Company

"I HOPE TO BE making bottles in Stroudsburg by Oct. 1," Dean Hunt, general manager of Oil City Glass Co. told Montgomery F. Crowe, head of Pocono Industries Inc., at a recent conference regarding the relocation of the Western Pennsylvania plant in Monroe County.

Yesterday Crowe released details of his industry-securing talks at a full meeting of the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce at the Penn-Stroud Hotel.

Crowe also pointed out that an option on 15 acres of land, owned by Edward Odzer, will be signed in the near future, and that officials of the Erie-Lackawanna Railroad have given option for 26 additional acres. It is expected that Oil City Glass will use these properties for its plant.

Crowe told the Chamber that Engineer Edward Hess has been given notification to survey the land and the company will send a copy of the building plans to him in the near future. The building will cost approximately $2,000,000, it was estimated.

Crowe said, "When the plant goes into operation it will employ about 200 people. And when it is in full operation there will be about 600 people employed."

Crowe reported of the many meetings held locally as well as in Harrisburg and Philadelphia to complete negotiations for Madison Shoe Co. to locate here in the Pocono Shoe Co. location.

He also reported of his talk at the recent meeting of the East Stroudsburg Taxpayers Association at which time he told the people present that Western Electric and Pipher Aircraft never came to this locality seeking land or buildings.

Alex Bensinger, president of the Pocono Mountain Chamber of Commerce, presented some of his plans for programs for the coming year.

Examples he gave were Law Problems of Small Businesses, Banking and Financing, and Stocks and Bonds. The speakers for these programs will be local people employed in these particular fields.

Another plan is to re-activate several of the committees. Some that he will re-activate are membership, planning and zoning and executive.

He will also institute a committee to answer criticism of the organization. This committee will also act as the public relations office for the chamber.

Another committee will be formed to launch a drive for the Industrial Development Commission.

Bensinger also plans to publish a monthly newsletter for the membership so that all members will be kept informed as to what is taking place.

In other business, Bensinger reported that he recently spent several hours in the office of the National Chamber of Commerce, Washington, D. C. and that he had obtained a great deal of information that could be used locally.

He said that he would pass the information on to those that wanted it and that a full list of items he obtained could be had by calling the Chamber's office.

One Hurt In 3 Area Accidents

ONE PERSON was injured in three accidents investigated by State Police at Stroudsburg and Mt. Pocono yesterday morning.

At 3:30 a.m., a tractor-trailer owned by George E. Treys, Inc., Binghamton, N. Y., and driven by James C. Corrigan, 38, of 129 W. 1st St., Wilkes-Barre, skidded on icy Route 940 in Pocono Township, jackknifed and hit an embankment, hurling the driver through the windshield.

Troopers at Mt. Pocono said Corrigan was treated by Dr. E. O. Headrick of Mt. Pocono for bruises of the face, scalp and left leg and was discharged.

At 6:15 a.m., a car driven by Jacob James Jr., 49, of East Stroudsburg RD 1, struck a patch of ice on Legislative Route 45061 at Minidink Hill, skidded and hit a concrete flow-urn. Damage was estimated at $150 to the car. James was not hurt.

At 8 a.m., a car driven by Carolyn Cullen, 19, Shawnee-on-Delaware, also hit a patch of ice on Legislative Route 45061 and struck a parked car owned by Richard E. Norris, 33, Shawnee. There were no injuries and total damages were estimated at $800.

The Printed Word

Since the day some two centuries ago when Arnold Zenger first defied government with the printed word, it has come a long way in America and in most of the rest of the world. From those dim beginnings of freedom of speech and freedom of the press, the printed word has come to be the standard bearer of truth and freedom.

As The Daily Record joins with other newspapers in the nation in observing National Printing Week, there are many thoughts that go through one's head on the importance of the medium to each and every resident of our own area and the world in general.

As you read your newspaper each day, you glance over story after story with never a thought about the importance of its even having been printed. We read stories on reapportionment in Pennsylvania, on the Tocks Island dam project, on world news, and a host of other items of public information and interest.

We read the ideas and opinions of our elected officials, persons with whom we probably never have direct contact; we read editorials concerning current problems and projects in The Stroudsburgs and in Monroe County that we would never even know about if it were not for the printed word.

It is fitting that National Printing Week is held in that period which includes the birthday of Benjamin Franklin, who is sometimes referred to as the father of American printing. Of course, the printed word and the modern newspaper have come a long way since the days of Franklin and Zenger, but the principle remains the same down through the ages.

From the first day that Gutenberg used moveable type down to the present day, designers and inventors have worked diligently to bring the printed word to the speed and excellence you enjoy today.

The printed word is the treasure chest of freedom!

Double Standard For OAS?

Steps which the Organization of American States takes — or declines to take — in sanctions against Fidel Castro's Communist Cuba will determine the future influence of the organization.

And the role which our nation plays at the Jan. 22 session at Punta del Este, Uruguay, could be the decisive one.

The problem is simple: Four key Latin nations — Mexico, Argentina, Brazil and Chile — show a conspicuous blindness to the Communist threat to their own security and continue a marked reluctance to take firm action against Castro's dictatorship of the left. This reluctance was not shown in the case of Trujillo's dictatorship of the right.

To impose the sanctions, votes of 14 nations are required. Only 13 votes are considered sure. Accordingly one line of thought in the State Department is that we should defer to our reluctant neighbors and avoid any strong hand which might go down to defeat.

But this completely overlooks the 12 Latin American states ready to vote with us, who have already broken diplomatic relations with Havana. Indeed some of them (where Red subversion has been most conspicuous) feel nearly as strongly against Castro as we do.

Accordingly, if we do not force the issue, there may be a letdown instead of a showdown.

This Country and the OAS itself may lose more in the long run through settling for halfway measures against Castro than by taking a chance on a firm policy.

Soft-pedaling the issue might get enough votes to win.

But it would have the effect of establishing a double standard in the OAS — one line to be used against dictators of the right and a softer one to be used against dictators of the left.

Fire At Yale

It is interesting to study a recent poll taken at Yale concerning the Cold War. The students differ from the President, who is more optimistic. The students get a side-glance view of the picture, but what they say is not to be ignored. For instance, the Yale boys answer thus:

"Which side is gaining in the Cold War?"
10% U.S. and the West
75% Russia and the Communist bloc
11% Neither
4% Don't know.

The President's State of the Union speech has the United States war ahead in the Cold War, although a year ago we were behind. His data is conclusive and encouraging. The students could not know until the President told them what he had done to achieve such a result as this:

"But our strength may be tested at many levels. We intend to have at all times the capacity to resist non-nuclear, or limited, attacks as a complement to our nuclear capacity, not as a substitute."

"Thus we have doubled the number of ready combat divisions in the Army's Strategic Reserve, increased our troops in Europe, built up the Marine, added new seafight and airlift capacity, modernized our weapons and ammunition, expanded our antiaircraft forces and increased the active fleet by more than seventy vessels and our tactical Air Forces by nearly a dozen wings."

Maybe the President should have spoken earlier because what he says is what the students want to hear. It is heart-warming that our young people are neither discouraged nor frightened. In fact, we are ready to meet the problems that face us. These Yale questions and answers are exciting: "In regard to the overall military strength of the two blocs, do you think that the U. S. is:

2% Much stronger than Russia
38% Stronger than Russia
15% Weaker than Russia
0% Much weaker than Russia
7% Don't know
"Should the U. S. become more aggressive in the Cold War?"
86% Yes."

Anyone who listened to President Kennedy's speech cannot possibly assume that he believes that the United States is weaker than Soviet Russia.

The Pennsylvania Story

Similarity In Administrations

Harrisburg—Peculiarly perhaps, Pennsylvania's Democratic Lawrence Administration in one way is a smacking counterpart of the pre-Kennedy-Republican Eisenhower Administration in Washington.

This of course may come as somewhat of a shock and hair-raising revelation to staunch hot-on-the-ped Pennsylvania donkey riders, but the fact is the trait does have its good and sound points.

It is being pointed up more and more with each passing week as the anti-administration bloc in the Legislature increases demands for legislative probes of this or that state agency.

This is not to say the pro-administration bloc is in the wrong, or that such legislative look-see into the actions of the executive branch should not be made. Quite to the contrary and notwithstanding the irritated opposition (understandably) on the part of the executive branch, it is still the constitutional duty of the Legislature to "make certain" the executive branch is functioning properly.

There is a peculiarity however that makes such legislative probes blunted affairs at best — under the current Lawrence Administration circumstances, and it is a peculiarity reflecting the Republican Eisenhower Administration in Washington.

Mr. Eisenhower, as it is well known by now, was a strong believer in the so-called "staff system" — that is, the delegation of full authority (within reason) to subordinates whenever and wherever possible.

This unquestionably was a "hangover" (forgive the expression) from his more active military days. The staff system is the system upon which the armed forces function administratively.

As for Pennsylvania's Governor Lawrence, most certainly it was never his intent to "copy" the system used by Mr. Eisenhower, but nevertheless this is the very point the two political opposites have in common.

Mr. Lawrence follows the staff system principle fairly closely — it first becoming apparent nearly four years ago in the early days of his administration. It has developed ever since that time until today it is indeed in a flourishing state (no pun intended).

Under the Lawrence-Eisenhower "staff system," the chief executive relies preponderantly — and we use this word specifically — on key subordinates to insure that functions within the domain of each are carried out thoroughly, properly and with precision.

This involves full administrative action on the "secondary level" and includes up to the tip-top point the making of policy decisions.

Mr. Lawrence by far has carried this delegation system to greater extent than any governor preceding him. For him it is nothing new — it's the way he has operated throughout his entire political life.

The point is: as the chief executive he relies almost wholly on the actions of key subordinates — and expects them to be right. When things go wrong within the various and sundry state departments and agencies, they are the ones held responsible; that is, they are held responsible by the governor. (Constitutionally and technically the governor as the top administrative officer is actually "the" responsible one.)

It is true there has been "delegation of authority" on the part of some chief executives before — but never to the degree prevalent during the Lawrence Administration. Very rarely has Mr. Lawrence "over-riden" top subordinates.

In light of demands again this week for legislative probing, the sidelight — or common peculiarity — is worth noting.

Nearly 500 people enrolled in a first aid class on the campus of East Stroudsburg State Teachers College.

A truck loaded with coal upset after it struck a car at the intersection of Courtland and Analomink Streets. There were no injuries but a lot of coal was spilled on the highway.

Remember the federal auto stamp that you had to have to drive your car. The $2.00 stamp was in addition to all other items necessary to operate a car.

The Allen-Scott Report

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

Washington, January 16 — A week before the convening of the highly important Pan American foreign ministers conference in Uruguay, President Kennedy and his inner advisers are still up in the air on exactly what stand to take there regarding Communist-ruled Cuba.

Secretary Dean Rusk is urging a tough policy. The State Department head favors pressing for a hemispheric crackdown by imposing economic sanctions on Castro.

To lend congressional weight to this position, Rusk wants the Senate to approve the resolution adopted 404 to 2 by the House last May advocating such sanctions and also kicking Cuba off the Inter-American Defense Board.

But leaders of the Senate

Foreign Relations Committee, where this resolution has been stalled for months, are still in the dark as to the position of three other key officials—the President; Robert Woodward, Assistant Secretary in charge of Latin-American Affairs; and Deputy Assistant Secretary Richard Goodwin, who until recently was special White House adviser in this field.

The best word committee leaders have been able to get is that the President is undecided which course to pursue; Woodward is of a "mixed mind;" and Goodwin leans toward "compromise."

Presumably, this uncertainty will be clarified this week before Rusk, Woodward and Goodwin depart for the Uruguay party.

If it isn't, Castro is likely to emerge more or less unscathed. In an effort to unravel this backstage snarl, Senator J. William Fulbright, D. Ark., chairman, has summoned the three officials for private talks with the committee. For one thing, he wants to get at the bottom of Rusk's present advocacy of cracking down on Castro.

This is a complete reversal for the State Department head.

Involved Snarl — Last summer, Rusk opposed committee approval of the House's overwhelmingly adopted resolution.

He argued this would "embarrass some of our Latin American friends"—notably Mexico, Brazil and Argentina, which are insisting on a hands-off policy toward Cuba.

Fulbright fully agreed with Rusk, and as a result the resolution was pigeonholed.

That is still Fulbright's view. He continues to hold that the resolution "will do more harm than good." But Rusk now feels the situation has greatly changed since Castro's boastful announcement that he has long been an ardent Communist.

Senate concurrence in the House resolution, Rusk contends, will importantly implement a U. S. drive at the Uruguay conference to impose hemispheric sanctions on Cuba. But the big question is whether there will be such a drive.

There is no assurance of that yet. Foreign Relations Committee leaders hear Goodwin has returned from an announced trip to Latin America with a "compromise" that, in effect, will "warn" Castro but take no concrete action against him.

Meanwhile, the Committee has authoritative information that the Cuban dictator continues to circumvent this country's trade embargo through Mexico and Canada.

From exporters in these countries, he is continuing to get a small but steady flow of urgently-needed auto, truck, aviation, electrical and other machinery parts to keep Cuba's largely U. S.-equipped industry and transportation operating.

Last year, Castro's imports from Mexico totaled $3 million — more than double the 1960 target. Canadian exports to Cuba exceeded $35 million.

Canadian officials deny there is transshipment of U. S. goods to Cuba. But they admit there have been some "slip-ups," and that there has been one prosecution and another is pending.

In one of these "slip-ups," 50 diesel engines and numerous machine parts were seized. In two other cases, $350,000 of insecticides and $80,000 of ball bearings were grabbed.

No Need To Worry — Prime Minister Nehru can relax! President Kennedy still disapproves of the armed seizure of Goa and the two other Portuguese colonies, but has no intention of retaliating by curbing U. S. aid to India.

This message has been conveyed to Nehru personally by the U. S. embassy in Delhi. The President's position was spelled out as follows:

"The President personally rejected a Portuguese plea that the U. S. raise the Goa seizure in the United Nations Assembly after a resolution urging India to withdraw had been vetoed by Russia in the Security Council. But while rebuffing Portugal, the President earnestly hopes that in the future India will give more thought to American public reaction to events there, for the sake of both countries.

The U. S. needs and wants the friendship of India, and is aware that nothing is gained by slamming doors against it. At the same time, the U. S. is against armed aggression anywhere. This country's opposition to India's action in Goa was based on the use of force, and implied no support for "colonialism" on the Indian subcontinent or anywhere else.

In the President's opinion, India is a major anti-Communist force in Asia, and he believes it is in the interest of the U. S., as well as in the interest of all free countries, to help support Indian democracy.

Having thus been rebuked, Nehru is now free to seek new U. S. aid.

Inside You And Yours

Chipped Choppers

By Burton H. Fern, M.D.
Your son comes home with his front teeth chipped and pointing in every direction.

Will his teeth turn gray? Fall out? Or protrude like Bugs Bunny's?

Inside the tooth's hard enamel shell, stringy dentine pulp surrounds a central root canal.

Don't worry about chipped enamel. The dentist can grind down all jagged points.

If steamy soups and icy drinks can seep through into the dentine, the tooth will gnaw and ache. The dentist may fill this "cavity" or cover the tooth with a porcelain jacket to look like new.

Can Be Salvaged
The nerve tears when the split runs all the way to the root canal. Usually, bleeding blood vessels next to the nerve color and eventually darken the white enamel. But root canal treatment—cleaning and filling the canal—can still salvage the tooth.

Like a boat, a tooth may look shipshape above the water line and still be ripped apart down below.

Roots can break and become loose. Topside, the tooth dies like a tree cut off from its roots. Because the tooth may change slowly over months and years, the dentist has to check regularly. He can usually straighten bent teeth and anchor them in place with wire or rubber bands. When the gum fills in, the wire comes off.

Can Fall Out
If the inner coating of the tooth socket rips open, the tooth eventually falls out. Otherwise, every tooth can be saved.

When you lose one tooth, you actually lose two. Its opposite can't help you chew, either.

As long as roots remain, the dentist can attach tiny supports and cement a false tooth in place. You can't tell this false tooth from the real thing—unless you stop brushing. It's the one that doesn't get the cavities!

We wonder how folks distinguish Frank and Fred apart? They are so much alike but different somehow. But how?

If ever a fellow looked like a professional football line-backer, Dick Campeotto has to take the nod. Even his strut in civilian clothes indicates a Sam Huff or a Chuck Bednarik is around.

Well Campy, a former Stroud Union satellite, doesn't get the background from the wind. Service ball play with the likes of Dick Szymanski, the ex-Notre Dame star and Baltimore Colt center must have brushed off on the well-over-200 Jerry Stulgaitis protegee.

East Stroudsburg State Teacher backers phoned us to say a few more of the College Hill faculty has aided the community many times in the past.

They brought out Paul Crawn, former county director of Civil Defense; Dr. Francis McGarry, a long-time leader in Boy Scout activities; and Dr. Theodore Moore, youth church work. And there are more.

Rinngadingding!

In a way, the plot of Frank Sinatra's life has been more dramatic than any of his films. For many years the lights flashed and bells rang. Life was a song for Frank . . . Suddenly the melody ended. The music was replaced by the harsh sounds of failure. His record sales dried. His flickers were box office flops. He was broke. The government sued him for $110,000 in back taxes. He was the target of withering criticism in and out of the press. As the final indignity, his agents dropped him . . . The only one who refused to panic or surrender was Sinatra. Out of the darkness came the indomitable spark — and a star blazed again . . . The turning point, of course, was the role of Maggio in "From Here to Eternity."

Sinatra primed his resurgence with a true fighter's instinct. In recalling the dark days he has stated: "One morning I woke up and decided that this kind of thing has got to stop. The facts weren't pleasant but I've always known how to face facts. I went into training the same way a prize fighter would" . . . He played Maggio for a mere $8,000. Within a few months after the film was released Sinatra was flying high again. His voice returned with all of its creamy warmth. His record sales zoomed. During the next three years Sinatra's gross income averaged $4 million annually. He became the highest paid performer in show business history.

In detailing the rags-to-riches-rags-to-riches story, Sinatra observed: "I'm not much on the philosophical stuff. People often remark that I'm pretty lucky. I don't think luck, as such, has much to do with it. You've got to have something more substantial. The competition is too fierce. Luck is only important insofar as getting a chance to sell yourself at the right moment. After that, you've got to have talent and learn how to use it. It's very difficult for me to describe how I feel about it all. I'm older now and I have a better appreciation of the realities."

Of course Sinatra was lucky. He was lucky enough to have talent. And he was fortunate enough to have the spunk which enables champions to be at their best when obstacles are most formidable.

As Juliet evidently knows, Sinatra is no stereotyped Romeo. He is a charmer, but he is also unpredictable. One of his former flames confessed: "You have to take Frankie as he is. When you invite him to a party, he may be an hour late or he may not show up at all. He gets involved and forgets even to telephone." . . . An actress who co-starred with him in a film later sighed: "I think Frank treats a woman the way she deserves. He makes you feel like a woman" . . . Sinatra is also extremely generous with those who excite his pitapat. He is said to have showered one actress with $100,000 worth of gifts in six months. Another actress has declared: "When Frank looks at you, a well of affection suddenly springs up and suddenly it's a Cadillac."

In Sinatra's lexicon, "a gasser" applies to a person who's a big leaguer, the best; he can hit the ball right out of the park. "The opposite of a gasser is a nowhere 'a bunter; he can never get to first base." . . . As a fighter in many fields of endeavor, Sinatra is a gasser. He has long had a mighty aversion to injustice in any form. One of his friends has noted: "Frank bleeds for the underdog because he feels like one. Don't ask me why." In fighting bigotry, for example, he has been quick to take action. He once slugged a waiter who refused to serve a Negro. Another time he belted a guy out with a left hook and a right cross for an anti-Semitic remark.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

Catching up on the news of what I missed when I've been away, even for a short time, is always an absorbing occupation, especially on a rainy, windy day like yesterday. But among all the happy news, it seems, there is always at least one which saddens my heart.

This time it was the news of the death of Mrs. W. Dolby Palmer. Everyone connected with club or community work for 30 years will remember her with admiration and affection. And for me there is also a touch of awe.

Fresh out of school in June, tackling a job I'd never done before — and that nobody else had done either, locally, I turned for help to the two women I regarded as the Grande Dames of local society: how should I go about getting news about women's doings in Monroe County?

I found Mrs. Ernest H. Wyckoff and Mrs. Palmer together, sitting on the porch on Thomas St., and with a tongue which cleaved to my dry mouth tried to explain my predicament. What clubs there weren't meeting, I'd been away at school for four years and didn't know what was happening, and where should I start?

They couldn't have been more kind, or more interested — or more bewildered about how to advise me. "My mother always told me," Mrs. Palmer said, "That the only time a lady has her name in the newspaper is when she is born, when she is married, and when she dies."

It seemed pretty slim pickings for a new-fledged reporter of women's news, but they did manage to find a few suggestions: a card party for the hospital was coming up; a tag day for something else; a church picnic; and then there was the Williams-Sayre wedding.

Mrs. Wyckoff is still a tower of strength to me. Mrs. Palmer, while she was always chary of being in the news personally, certainly made it for me — and for the community — in a multitude of worthy projects, a guiding light for many social gains, for many years thereafter until she moved away.

Wise, intelligent, kind and gracious, knowledgeable about the world outside the county and an authority on the people within it, she still remains in my mind what people used to mean when they said "a lady".

Powerful Buckeyes Still Unanimous Pick For First

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Undeclared Ohio State is again the unanimous choice for first place in the Associated Press major college basketball poll today, surviving a major shakeup that lifted Kentucky into the runner-up position and knocked for a loop Mississippi State and Villanova.

The powerful Buckeyes, the only remaining major unbeaten team, were placed on top by all 41 sportswriters and broadcasters participating in the balloting. In its only game last week, Ohio State trounced Michigan 89-64.

Kentucky, the Southeastern Conference pace-setter, moved into second place on the strength of victories over Vanderbilt and Louisiana State. The Wildcats changed places with Cincinnati's Bearcats, who were upended by Bradley 70-68 in overtime. Bradley, unranked last week, moved into ninth place.

Mississippi State, which suffered its first setback Saturday night, 100-86 to Vanderbilt, fell three notches to the No. 10 position. Villanova, sixth a week ago, dropped from the first 10 after losing its second of the campaign, 87-66 to Xavier of Ohio.

Kansas State, winner over Kansas 70-45 and Oklahoma State 50-44, advanced one place to fourth while Duquesne, which whipped Dayton and Carnegie Tech, climbed from eighth to fifth.

Southern California dropped from fourth to sixth and Duke moved up three places to seventh. The Trojans split two games with Washington over the weekend while the Blue Devils turned back Clemson and Maryland.

Oakwood Upsets Crowe Keglers

OAKWOOD LANES of Washington, N.J., has done it again. For the second straight time, they put the skids to Crowe's in D. V. League action Saturday night at Colonial Lanes.

Anchor man Bill Beagle inspired the Oakwood boys with a fine 244 opener and their second game was well balanced team effort. They also won total wood by 112 pins.

In the final game Russ Bergman ignited the local team with his seven straight strikes and provided the punch to get the local keggers at least one point.

On Saturday Crowe's will receive a bye and resume action the following week with Pasch's at Colonial Lanes.

Reeves Still Rams Boss Despite Ouster Movement
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The majority owners of football's Los Angeles Rams have made a new move to oust Dan Reeves as boss — but he says it won't work.

The majority stockholders held a meeting, elected oilman Ed Pauley chairman, and said that gives him the right to run the National Football League club any way he sees fit.

Reeves, a wealthy stockbroker and president of the Rams since he brought them here from Cleveland 17 years ago, called the election null and void and said he'll still be boss.

The Ram owners have been feuding for six years. The team has been operating under a compromise agreement that recognized Reeves as president and gave him 50 per cent authority. The agreement expired last Dec. 31, and the election followed.

Reeves owns about one third of the partnership. Pauley about one third, and the other third is owned by Fred Levy, Hall Seley and Bob Hope.

History's Best To Appear In Hoop All-Star

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The National Basketball Association All-Star squads which meet Tuesday night in St. Louis are the best in the game's history. In the opinion of West Coach Fred Schaus of Los Angeles.

"You could pick an all-time team for the sport without going beyond the 22 players on these two squads," said Schaus, who played in the first NBA All-Star game in 1951 at Boston.

"I know a lot of the old timers will disagree," he said.

The East squad includes the top scorer in basketball annals — point-a-minute Wilt Chamberlain of Philadelphia—plus a quartet from the perennial NBA champion Boston Celtics, led by the game's top ball-handler and feeder—Bob Cousy.

Red Auerbach of Boston will coach the East for the sixth straight year. He has a 3-2 won-lost record in All-Star games. This is Schaus' first turn as an All-Star coach.

AAU Wins Support From New York Coaching Group

NEW YORK (AP) — "I've always felt the college track coaches have had enough voice in the AAU."

"I'm sympathetic to the AAU." "I have no objection to the AAU."

"The AAU always has handled me to my satisfaction." These were some of the comments from the other side of the fence Monday in the running battle between the AAU and the NCAA. They came from members of the Metropolitan Coaches Association at the weekly luncheon of the New York Track Writers Association.

Joe Healey of New York University, president of the Metropolitan association, said his group had not taken any official stand in the power battle that was climaxed last Saturday when the coaches, with NCAA backing, formed an association and threatened to hold a national championship meet in competition with the AAU championships in June.

"I can't see any necessity for a new federation," said Healey, "and I can't see any need for this battle. If necessary, the two factions should be forced to get together for the good of track."

"I always have felt the coaches have enough voice in the AAU." Healey added that he feels most of the coaches were ignorant of the controversy and indicated that it should have been settled within the framework of the AAU.

Soccer Seen As Becoming A Great Spectator Sport

BY CURT PRINS
Sports Editor

SOCCER hasn't become a great spectacular sport in the United States because people don't understand the game, says John Eiler.

Eiler, soccer coach at East Stroudsburg State College, is the new president of the American Soccer Football Coaches Assn. He was elected to the post last week in New York at the group's convention.

"If more people were able to see the way soccer is played in foreign countries," says Eiler, "it would quickly catch on as a spectacular sport."

Eiler feels that the international soccer matches that were on television last year helped to build fans in this country. But he also realizes that United States high school and college teams haven't "scratched the surface" in equalling the play of foreign teams.

Taken By Storms
"When United States teams have mastered the game as well as foreign clubs," says Eiler, "soccer is going to take this country by storm." The new soccer president doesn't mean that soccer will replace football or any other sport. He makes it very clear that soccer is not competing with football and that there is room for both sports.

"Soccer gives boys who are not big enough to play football a chance to compete in a fast rugged sport," he says.

He also believes that schools that are too small to play football or can't afford the sport, should take up soccer.

But he also believes that when these small schools combine into jointures, soccer should not be dropped just because the school has a bigger enrollment. "There is just as much need for soccer in big schools as in small ones," he says.

According to Eiler, the reason that the caliber of soccer has been slow in improving in this country, is the lack of qualified coaches.

"In too many schools," he says, "one of the physical education teachers is told to coach soccer. Many of them have never played the game outside of gym class."

"Soccer is on the increase now," says Eiler, "we can tell by the increase in the members of our association. And with more schools picking up the sport, that means that better coaches will be produced as these players graduate and go into teaching and coaching."

Eiler realizes that soccer might pick up more spectators if the rules used in high school and colleges were changed to allow more body contact, such as the European rules.

But he points out that if contact were allowed, it would greatly increase the number of injuries and hurt the sport more than helping it.

"Soccer is a good spectacular sport," says Eiler. "You can see the ball at all times and every man on the field has an equal chance to handle the ball. Some day we'll have the huge crowds you hear about at foreign games."
